The Problem

For a business to run efficiently, it is vital for the business platform (website/mobile app/software) to be well-functioning. There are several service vendors whose promises are limited to brochures and aren't able to deploy it in reality.

Resultantly, they create software solutions that lack innovativeness, and they drive customers away. There is in-active software development process, low standards of quality with errors and bugs. There can be issues related to product usability, performance, security, compatibility, testing that are usually faced by end customer.
